

ADDRESS BY PROF. ZHANG WENKANG, MINISTER OF HEALTH

Dear Mr. President, ladies, gentlemen and friends:

The XVth International Leprosy Congress begins today in Beijing. Entrusted by Vice Premier Li Lanqing of the State Council and on behalf of the government of the People's Republic of China, I would like to express sincere congratulations to the grand opening of the Congress and a warm welcome to friends all over the world.

In recent years, WHO, ILA, ILEP, and other nongovernmental organizations have successfully carried out the movement of "making leprosy no longer a public health problem," which played an active role in the protection of human health and promotion of economic development. This Congress will surely push the effort forward. I wish every success to the Congress.

China is a developing country with vast territories and a huge population. Leprosy has had a long history in China and used to be a serious infectious disease. After the establishment of the New China, the Chinese government has paid great attention to antileprosy work, set up practical control tactics according to the real situation of our country, and adopted active measurements. Through long-term arduous effort of the numerous health workers, leprosy has been effectively controlled. During the last decades, our government has formulated and promulgated related laws and regulations, in addition to extensive health education, and at the same time strengthened scientific research and international academic exchange, and achieved great success.

Our country will further strengthen anti-leprosy work in the future, carry out the work with continued stable and coordinated development, and make a contribution to the global anti-leprosy cause.

"Working Toward a World Without Leprosy" is the common wish of humankind and also the main goal of the global anti-leprosy work. China will continuously work together with other countries over the world to do our best in the fight against leprosy for the improvement of health and the progress of human civilization.

ACHIEVEMENTS AND PROSPECTS ON LEPROSY PREVENTION AND CONTROL IN CHINA PROF. YIN DAKUI, VICE-MINISTER OF HEALTH

Distinguished Chairperson, ladies and gentlemen:

Good afternoon.

On behalf of the Ministry of Health of the People's Republic of China and the Chinese Organizing Committee, I would like to express my warm congratulations to the successful convention of the conference and express my warm welcome to the experts, scholars and friends from all over the world. Now, I would like to present a report on leprosy prevention and control in China to the conference.

Introduction on health care service in China

China is a country with 31 provinces, autonomous regions, municipalities and a Hong Kong Special Administration Region (not including Taiwan), 391 prefectures (including cities under the provincial administration), and 2802 counties and towns. Fifty-six nationalities are living in a terri-
